Architectural photographs of a residential or commercial interior are often a telling portrait of the people that live or work there. The interior is a three dimensional artwork viewed from many different perspectives. The challenge of finding, selecting, and capturing the best views through lighting, angles, height, depth of field, camera and lens type. Using the right creative process is what makes architectural photography so rewarding and special.

On location FDG's sense of context and aesthetics, as well as his many years of experience, help tackle the challenges of on location shooting and deliver fresh imagery appropriate to our client's needs.

A passionate commitment to remain up-to-date with the most effective technologies and equipment, and an in-house expert post-production allow Ed and Sandy to meet the expectations and deadlines of clients of all sizes.
